GREEK CROWN PRINCE TAKES FATHER'S PLACE ON THRONE; ARMY TO BE RE-MOBILIZED

Garrisons in Macedonia Yield to Revolutionists After Soldiers at Salonica Are Fired On in Uprising—Pro-Allies Now in Control.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—A serious revolution has broken out in northern Greece, and according to Salonica reports King Constantine has abdicated the throne.

Official despatches from Salonica this afternoon announced that the revolutionists are in control of one district in Macedonia. The Government forces in the Macedonian town of Vodena have joined the revolutionists. The Greek troops in Salonica were disarmed and interned by the Anglo-French forces after a crowd of revolutionists had laid siege to the garrison and fighting had resulted.

Athens apparently is cut off from communication with the outside world. No confirmation of King Constantine's abdication have come from the Greek capital, but it is known that a revolutionary party favoring the allies was secretly active.

The twenty-six-year-old Crown Prince, George, according to Salonica reports, assumed the regency following his father's abdication. An idol of the Greek people and pro-ally sympathizer, he is understood to have the backing of ex-Premier Venizelos, leader of the pro-war party.

The general mobilization of the Greek army has been ordered. It is believed here that as Greece, influenced by Bulgaria's declaration of war on Roumania to-day, will immediately range her armies beside those of the allies in a great Balkan offensive to crush the Bulgars.

THREE IN SALONICA GARRISON KILLED BEFORE INTERNMENT.

Details of the disturbance in Salonica are given in a later despatch to Reuters' Telegram Company, which says that when the volunteers, as the revolutionists called themselves, ascertained the Regulars were unwilling to co-operate with them, they surrounded the barracks in the night, cut the water main and electric light wires and shut off food supplies.

A detachment of sixty Regulars attempted to break its way out to obtain supplies. Its surrender was demanded, and when the Regulars refused the volunteers fired shots in the air. Whereupon the volunteers opened fire on them, compelling them to return to the barracks.

The allied commander, Gen. Sarrahl, intervened to prevent further bloodshed. Altogether, according to the latest reports, three men were killed and one gendarme and two volunteers were wounded.

The soldiers refused to treat with

GRAND JURY WILL MAKE INQUIRY IN FOOD CONSPIRACY

Commissioner Hartigan Tells Federal and Local District Attorneys of Defiance of Law.

CHICKENS HELD BACK.

Kept in Storage to Force Prices in Event of Strike—All Eatables Are Advanced.

Wholesale dealers in live poultry who have held 160 carloads of chickens in New Jersey and Staten Island railroad yards while the price was boosted from 15 to 25 cents, were today notified to appear Tuesday morning before District Attorney Swann and show cause why they should not be held for the Grand Jury for conspiracy in restraint of trade.

"Under the pretense that there might be a strike," said the District Attorney, "a combination of wholesale slaughterers and distributors of poultry has very evidently entered into a conspiracy. These men are responsible for the raise in the price of poultry from 15 cents to 25 cents a pound over night."

"I believe that the rise in the price of poultry, as all pretense and without the slightest justification. It stands to reason that all dealers in foods throughout the city cannot arrive at a uniform increase unless there is some sort of a secret or implied understanding as to what the new price will be. Therefore, it does not require very much imagination, to arrive at the conclusion that a conspiracy must exist among a combination of food distributors."

STATE LAW COVERS THE OFFENSE.

"There is an anti-trust law in this State, which fixes penalties for unlawful combinations. The strength of this law—the Donnelly Act—will be invoked by this office wherever evidence of unlawful rise in food prices is found."

"When the wholesale poultry dealers appear before me on Tuesday I will give them an opportunity to justify their action, if they can. If they can't I will proceed with the evidence I already have and that which I may acquire and lay the whole matter before the Grand Jury."

Commissioner of Weights and Measures Joseph Hartigan announced after closing his investigation of the food situation to-day, that he would lay the facts before District Attorney Swann and the United States District Attorney for the Southern District of New York.

"The most astounding conspiracy that has sprung up during the last two or three days," said Commissioner Hartigan, "has been hatched by a coterie of Southern and Western shippers of live poultry."

"Several days ago a million and a half live chickens cooped in cars on their way to this city were held up in Jersey City, Hoboken and Staten Island terminals on orders from the shippers. They demanded that the poultry be held at the terminals until further orders."

Meanwhile, over 2,000,000 people in the Greater City, who make a practice of buying fresh killed chickens on the eve of their Sabbath, were confronted with a shortage unprecedented in local history. Naturally, the price of chickens went up. On Wednesday the price of live poultry was 15 cents a pound

Caleb Smith, age ninety-six, brother of the bride to be, heard that she had "went off with that smart Williams fellow." He threw off the kinks of his ninety-six years, loaded his squirrel gun with rock salt, mounted a mule and was off for the courthouse.

He persuaded young Williams—with two loads of rock salt in the tank and a right smash to the jaw—to call off the ceremony.

TWO DIE IN CHAIR; GOVERNOR GRANTS THIRD A RESPITE

Hanel, Slayer of Aged Mrs. Heilner, His Benefactress, Pays Penalty.

JAN TRYBUS GOES, TOO.

Reprieve of Two Weeks for Bambrich, Convicted of Killing Policeman.

Joseph Hanel, for the murder of Mrs. Julia Heilner in Brooklyn, and Jan Trybus, for killing a man at Batavia, were put to death in Sing Sing Prison to-day.

Hanel went to the chair first, at 5.52, and after two shocks was pronounced dead at 5.59.

Trybus received the first of three shocks at 6.03 and was dead at 6.13. The electrocutions were without unusual incident. Both men went to their death calmly, and neither made any statement.

Hanel killed Mrs. Julia Heilner in her home, No. 217 Albemarle Road, Flatbush, April 23, 1915, by beating her on the head with a beer bottle and knotting a rope around her neck. The prosecution contended he killed Mrs. Heilner when she caught him robbing the house. The articles he stole netted him only $23.

Jan Trybus killed Jacob Schoenberg with an iron bar at Batavia, N. Y., last October. He made a confession which his friends later claimed was obtained by improper means.

Thomas Bambrich, sentenced to die this morning at Sing Sing for the murder of Policeman George Dapping of this city, has received from Gov. Whitman a stay of execution for two weeks.

The order, which was based on an appeal purporting to offer an alibi, reached the prison just eleven hours before the time set for Bambrich's death.

"Gee, I'm glad!" exclaimed Bambrich, when he heard the news. Bambrich was convicted last December of the murder of Policeman George Dapping, who was shot in the barroom of the Manhattan Casino, One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Street and Eighth Avenue, at an outing of the The MacManus Association. The chief testimony against him was that of Policeman Dowling, who said he saw Bambrich shoot from the door.

Bambrich has consistently said he was not guilty, but until two days ago he would not tell with whom he was the night of the shooting, nor whom he believed guilty. He appears to have expected all along that the guilty man would confess, and, animated by a spirit of loyalty, he had refused to implicate any one.

Anna and Sidney Sylvander now swear they were with him in another room at the time of the shooting. The Sylvanders have disappeared, but Bambrich's attorney, Alexander Karlin, heard of their admissions through Bambrich's father and married sister. The condemned man first told his own complete story two days ago to Father Cashion.

WILSON SO SURE STRIKE CRISIS IS OVER HE LEAVES WASHINGTON

PRESIDENT GLAD AS HE SIGNS CHILD LABOR BILL

"It Will Mean Much to the Health and Vigor of the Country."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—President Wilson to-day signed the Child Labor Bill. The ceremony was witnessed by Secretary Wilson, Senator Robinson, Representative Keating, Julia Lathrop, Chief of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department, and a large group of men and women interested in the legislation.

"I want to say that with real emotion I sign this bill," the President said. "Because I know how long the struggle has been to secure legislation of this sort and what it is going to mean to the health and to the vigor of this country and also to the happiness of those whom it affects. It is with genuine pride that I play my part in completing this legislation. I congratulate the country and felicitate myself."

"That signature makes one of my fondest dreams come true," said Secretary of Labor Wilson, an interested spectator of the ceremony.

"YOU'RE THE PRESIDENT," SAID SIGHTSEEING PAIR

And He Admits It as He Whistles on His Way to Settle Strike Crisis.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The Capitol grounds were deserted save for a few sightseers when the President arrived to-day to renew his fight for eight-hour day legislation. He was walking along the sidewalk from the Senate Office Building, whistling, when he overheard a man and his wife mention the State of Colorado.

The President stopped, tipped his straw hat and, smiling, spoke to them. "Did I understand you to say you are from Colorado?" he asked.

"Yes," the man replied, "I am J. B. Fleming of Boulder, Colorado, and this is Mrs. Fleming."

Then as the President replied, "I am always interested in people from Colorado"—Mr. and Mrs. Fleming somewhat confusedly asked in concert, "Why, you're the President, aren't you?"

The President admitted the charge. "Well, I'm a sort of distant relative of Mrs. Wilson," Mrs. Fleming said. The President then told them a story about Mrs. Wilson. He said she had just received from some Indians out West a beautiful piece of bead work upon which tradition said Pocahontas was working just before the time of her death. At the conclusion of the story, Fleming said:

"Well, Mr. President, are you going to be able to stop this strike?"

Just then the Secret Service operatives reported the Senate was ready for him and the President left with their question unanswered.

Senate Leaders Debate Measure Which Carries Heavy Penalty and Provides That Wage Scales Be Fixed by Commission.

REED AND CUMMINS FIGHT ADDED CLAUSE

(Special From a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.) WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The vote in Congress on the Eight-Hour Day Bill was in favor of the measure to hold off the railroad strikes.

Final voting on the bill began at 4.30 P. M. after the House, in Committee of the Whole, had rejected the amendment of Representative Sterling, Illinois, Republican, for a permanent Board of Mediation and Conciliation to settle future wage disputes, and pending its report strikes and lockouts would be prohibited.

An amendment by Representative Small of North Carolina to specify the employees to be affected by the bill as conductors, engineers, firemen and trainmen was voted down.

An amendment by Representative Clark of Florida, applying the Eight-Hour Law to the shompen, trackmen, station agents and all other employees not provided for in the bill was rejected, 81 to 120.

Senate leaders said they would remain in session even after midnight to get a vote. In any event, they said, the completed bill should reach the President before to-morrow afternoon.

President Wilson was so confident his legislation to avert the strike would be passed that he left Washington at 3 o'clock for Long Branch, N. J., where he is to be notified to-morrow of his nomination.

Senator Newlands made a favorable report from the committee at 2.30 o'clock, and unanimous consent was

He expects to arrive at West End station at 8.45 o'clock to-night and will be met there by a large delegation of residents of Long Branch. Mrs. Wilson, Secretary Tamm, Dr. C. T. Grayson, and a large force of clerks accompanied him.

Arrangements were made at the White House to-day for sending to Shadow Lawn by special messenger the bill to meet the threatened railroad strike as soon as it is passed. Leaving Long Branch to-morrow night, President Wilson expects to arrive in Washington early Sunday morning, stay there three hours and then depart for Hot Springs, Ky., where on Monday he will accept the torchplace of Abraham Lincoln for the nation.

Setting on Baseball Is Legal. Social to This Evening World.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 1.—Setting on baseball is not gambling according to decision of Judge Sims of the first court here.
